

The Frontinus Society

- deals with the history of water, energy, and pipeline technology,
- informs its members regularly about activities, publications and interesting facts in these fields,
- maintains the Frontinus Presence Library with more than 6,000 titles on the history of technology of the gas and water industry as well as sanitary engineering,
- promotes and accompanies research projects as well as the publication of research results,
- organizes international knowledge transfer and exchange of experience with conferences, seminars, and excursions,
- publishes reference books and publications,
- was founded in 1976 as a scientific association of archaeologists, historians, engineers and natural scientists.

The Frontinus Society is recognized as a non-profit association.

Read more.