Call for the Frontinus-Award 2027

With members from nearly 20 countries around the world, the Frontinus Society is one of the leading international organizations dedicated to the history of water, energy and pipeline technology. Its scope spans from antiquity to the 19th century. The collaboration between archaeologists and engineers is one of our society's strengths.

The Frontinus Society regularly announces the Frontinus Award for bachelor's theses, master's theses, and dissertations in the field of the history of water, energy und pipeline technology.

The Frontinus Award comes with the following prize money:

Bachelor's thesis: 500 €
Master's thesis: 1,000 €
Doctoral dissertation: 2,000 €

These awards include

- the respective prize money,
- a certificate issued by the Frontinus Society,
- mention on the website www.frontinus.de, and
- a three-year membership in the Frontinus Society with no dues.

Acceptance of the Frontinus Award entails an obligation to acknowledge the support provided by the Frontinus Society in lectures and publications.

Please send your application, including a copy of your thesis, a statement from your thesis advisor, a brief summary, and your personal contact information, to the following address:
